NEW YORK

OCTOBER 1923

The name New Mexico Painters may suggest that the object is to represent New Mexican landscape, Mexicans, Indians. While this is true in a way, subjects are only an accidental urge to the creative artist. The name has been chosen in that wider sense of the Province of Nueva Mexico, which originally embraced most of the Southwest, and which to these Painters means the blended elements of three civilizations. Though the importance of an artist's contribution is dependent, not upon locality, but upon his individual ability to make of any subject a vital work of art, they feel that an artist paints best in a country that appeals to his sympathies.

Hoping moreover, that an art deeply rooted in the soil which has produced the individual may prove of more than individual significance, the New Mexico Painters are exhibiting to the American Public works whose inspiration is of native American origin.
